Best Practices in the Department of Urdu, University of Kashmir

Student Centered learning:

In the Department of Urdu at the University of Kashmir, a commitment to excellence and inclusivity serves as the cornerstone of their best practices. Emphasizing both traditional and contemporary approaches, the department fosters a dynamic learning environment where students engage with the rich literary heritage of Urdu while also exploring its relevance in modern contexts. Faculty members are dedicated mentors who prioritize student-centered learning, encouraging critical thinking and scholarly inquiry. Moreover, the department actively promotes linguistic diversity and cultural sensitivity, recognizing Urdu as not just a language, but a conduit for understanding and appreciating diverse perspectives. Through innovative teaching methodologies, collaborative research initiatives, and community outreach programs, the Department of Urdu at the University of Kashmir continually strives to uphold its reputation as a beacon of academic excellence and cultural enrichment.

Weekly literary Symposium “Bazm-e Adab”

The weekly symposium Bazm-e Adab conducted on every Wednesday at 2:00 pm in the Department of Urdu at the University of Kashmir stands as a vital forum for intellectual exchange and academic enrichment. These symposiums play a pivotal role in fostering a vibrant scholarly community within the department by providing students and faculty alike with a platform to present their research, share insights, and engage in constructive dialogue. By featuring a diverse array of topics ranging from classical Urdu literature to contemporary socio-political issues, these gatherings facilitate interdisciplinary learning and cultivate a deeper understanding of Urdu language and culture. Furthermore, the symposiums serve as a catalyst for collaboration and networking, encouraging cross-pollination of ideas and sparking new avenues of inquiry. Through their consistent commitment to organizing these gatherings, the Department of Urdu at the University of Kashmir demonstrates its dedication to nurturing intellectual curiosity and academic excellence among its constituents.
